Dear George:

We have an earlier approval from you for a 10% pay increase for personnel assigned to [REDACTED] for test work. For our engineers going overseas, we believe a 20% pay increase would be reasonable compensation for the dislocation and inconvenience caused these men. None of them were hired for field engineering work and they are being pressed into service for this assignment because of their knowledge of the equipment. Your approval is requested for such a differential as a direct charge to Contract [REDACTED]

Where?

If while overseas We expect to compensate our men for actual travel expense see page # 3 of #4 incurred. It would be desirable if there were some device of understanding for the submission of travel expense reports and cash reimbursement established through your organization so that expense money can be furnished these men while overseas.

Temporary individuals receive per diem in accordance with established policy of contract. When assigned to [REDACTED] it now appears more desirable to compensate our personnel assigned there for test work on the basis of per diem, rather than the 10% salary increase, because of the irregular schedules which they work at this location. We plan to change our compensation system accordingly, effective April 30th.
